The Hazard of Being Saved in the Church of Rome

The Hazard of being Saved

Serm. XI.

122

4. The Dostrine of Transubstantiation. A hard word, but I would to God that were the worst of it; the thing is much more difficult. I have taken some pains to consider other Religions that have been in the world, and I must freely declare, that I never yet in any of them met with any Article or Proposition, imposed upon the belief of men, half so unreasonable and hard to be believed as this is: And yet this in the Romis Church is esteemed one of the most principal Articles of the Christian Faith; tho there is no more certain foundation for it in Scripture, than for our Saviour's being subfractially changed into all those things which are said of him, as that he is a rock, a vine, a door, and a hundred other things.

But this is not all. This Doctrine hath not only no certain Foundation in Scripture, but I have a far heavier charge against it, namely, that it understood to the reason of the re Scripture, but I have a far neavier charge against it, namely, that it undermines the very foundation of Christianity it self. And surely nothing ought to be admitted to be a part of the Christian Doctrine which destroys the reafon of our belief of the whole. And that this Doctrine does so, will appear to the christian does so, will appear to the christian does not be appeared to the christian does not be a second to the christian does not be a s evidently, if we confider what was the main argument which the Apoftles used to convince the world of the truth of Christianity; and that was this, That our blessed Saviour, the Author of this Doctrine, wrought such and such miracles, and particularly that he rose again from the dead. And this they proved the such as because they were eye-witnesses of his miracles, and had seen him and conversed with him after he was risen from the dead. But what if their senses did deceive them in this matter? then it cannot be denied but that the main proof of Christianity falls to the ground.

Well! We will now suppose (as the Church of Rome does) Transab-finatiation to have been one principal part of the Christian Doctrine which the Apostles preached. But if this Doctrine be true, then all mens senses are deceived in a plain sensible matter, wherein 'tis a hard for them to be deceived as in any thing in the world: For two things can hardly be imagin'd more different, than a little bit of wafer and the whole body of a man.

So that the Apostles persuading men to believe this Doctrine persuaded them not to trust their fenses, and yet the argument which they used to perfuade them to this was built upon the direct contrary principle, that mens sense are to be trusted. For if they be not, then notwithstanding all the evidence the Apostles offer'd for the resurrection of our Saviour, he might not be the state of the contraction of the sense of the state of the be risen, and so the faith of Christians was vain. So that they represent the Apostles as absurd as is possible, viz. going about to persuade men out of their senses by virtue of an argument, the whole strength whereof depends upon the certainty of sense.

And now the matter is brought to a fair iffue; If the testimony of fense be to be relied upon, then Translubstantiation is false; If it be not, then no man is sure that Christianity is true. For the utmost affurance that the Apostles had of the truth of Christianity was the testimony of their own senses. concerning our Saviour's Miracles, and this testimony every man hath against Transubstantiation. From whence it plainly follows, that no man (no not the Apoftles themselves) had more reason to believe Christianity to be true, than every man hath to believe Transubstantiation to be false. And we who did not see our Saviour's Miracles (as the Apostles did) and have only a credible relation of them, but do see the Sacrament, have less evidence of the truth of Christianity than eighth of the Apostles of the truth of Christianity than eighth of the Christianity than eighth eighth of the Christianity than eighth eight evidence of the truth of Christianity than of the falshood of Transhoft antiation.

But cannot God impose upon the fenses of men, and represent things to them otherwise than they are? Yes, undoubtedly. And if he hath revealed that he doth this, are we not to believe him? Most certainly. But then we could be a Bouldsian with the first has been made sinh a Bouldsian with the first after the country to the first and the same a ought to be affured that he hath made fuch a Revelation; which Affurance no man can have, the certainty of sense being taken away.

Serm. XI. in the Church of Rome.

123

I shall press the business a little farther. Supposing the Scripture to be a Divine Revelation, and that these words (This is my Body) if they be in Scripture, must necessarily be taken in the strict and literal sense; I ask now, what greater evidence any man has that these words (This is my Body) are in the Bible, than every man has that the Bread is not chang'd in the Sacrament? Nay no man has so much; for we have only the evidence of one sense that these words are in the Bible, but that the Bread is not chang'd we have the concurring testimony of several of our senses. In a word, if this be once admitted that the Senses of all men are deceived in one of the most plain sensible matters that can be, there is no certain means left either to convey or prove a Divine Revelation to men; nor is there any way to confute the groffest impostures in the world: For if the clear evidence of all mens fenses be not sufficient for this purpose, let any man, if he can, find a better and more convincing argument.

5. I will instance but in one Doctrine more; And that shall be, their Dotrine of deposing Kings in case of Heresy, and absolving their Subjects from their Allegiance to them. And this is not a mere speculative dottrine, but hath been put in practice many a time by the Bilhops of Rome, as every one knows that is vers'd in History. For the troubles and confusions which were occasion'd by this very thing make up a good part of the History of se-

I hope no body expects that I should take the pains to shew that this was not the Doctrine of our Saviour and his Apostles, nor of the Primitive Christians. The Papists are many of them so far from pretending this, that in fome times and places, when it is not seasonable and for their purpose, we have much a do to persuade them that ever it was their Doctrine. But if Transubstantiation be their Doctrine, this is; for they came both out of the same Forge, I mean the Council of Lateran under Pope Innocent the Third. And if (as they tell us) Transubstantiation was then establish'd so was thir. And indeed one would think they were Twins and brought forth at the same time, they are so like one another, both of them so monstrously unreasonable.

II. I come now in the feeond place to confider some Practices of the Church of Rome, which I am afraid will prove as bad as her Doctrines.

I shall instance in these five.

1. Their celebrating of their Divine service in an unknown tongue. And that not only contrary to the practice of the Primitive Church, and to the great end and defign of Religious Worship, which is the edification of those who are concerned in it, (and it is hard to imagine how men can be edified by what they do not understand) but likewise in direct contradiction to St. Paul, who hath no less than a whole Chapter wherein he confutes this practice as fully, and condemns it as plainly as any thing is condemned in the whole Bible. And they that can have the face to maintain that this practice was not condemned by St. Paul, or that it was allowed and used in the first Ages of Christianity, need not be ashamed to set up for the desence of any paradox in the World.

2. The Communion in one kind. And that not with standing that even by their own acknowledgment our Saviour inftituted it in both kinds, and the Primitive Church administred it in both kinds. This I must acknowledge is no addition to Christianity but a facrilegious taking away of an effential part of the Sacrament. For the Cup is as effential a part of the institution as the Bread; and they might as well, and by the same authority, take away the one as the other, and both as well as either.

3. Their

Source: John Tillotson, "The Hazard of Being Saved in the Church of Rome," in The Works of the Most Reverend Dr. John Tillotson (London, 1696).